TRICKY BUSINESS

In granting an exclusive interview to the editor of the Russian official newspaper, Izvestia, who just happens to be a son-in-law of Nikita Khrushchev, President Kennedy has gone far beyond his call of duty as our elected leader.

Whether his bold action proves a "major breakthrough" into the Iron Curtain, and marks the beginning of a thaw in the "cold war," remains to be seen. The opposite possibility is that it could be interpreted as a compromise with godless Communism which will make Chamberlain's mission to Munich an insignificant incident by comparison.

Regardless of what the outcome may be there is no mistaking what Russian people think of it. What Americans think is another story. But it is unquestionably plain its primary purpose was to get President Kennedy's message across to Russian people. In this respect it appeared, at first, that he may have scored heavily, but Washington officials say today that the vast majority of Russians get a highly edited and very distorted version of the interview.

The amount of space, and the prominent display, given the interview proves what Khrushchev thinks of it, and if he has an ounce of feeling in his brutal makeup his son-in-law should rate a handsome increase in salary, maybe a new American automobile, or even a helicopter such as the one he bought for himself during his visit to former President Eisenhower.

We have always thought we are losing the cold war because of our failure to spread information about our way of life behind the Iron Curtain. Throughout the so-called "uncommitted nations" of the world, we don't think the proper way to do it is through Izvestia, and newspapers and television commentators who are holding this exclusive interview as evidence of "freedom of the press" in Russia don't know what they are talking about.

One of the first things Alexei Adzhubei said to President Kennedy at his home in Hyannis Port, Mass., was that when he (Kennedy) assumed office last January the rulers of the Kremlin hailed the change in administrations with delight, and he was assured by the President that co-existence is now our national policy.

Our willingness to re-open negotiations on a ban on nuclear weapons less than two months after the Soviet Union violated an agreement is unprecedented in the history of international relations, as is modification of the Potsdam agreement on Berlin.

Many of President Kennedy's strongest supporters believe he is charting the road to permanent peace by short-circuiting our cumbersome diplomatic practices in conducting international relations. Defeating Communism by using their own tactics, so to speak.

The way we see it is it will be disastrous if he lets Khrushchev and his son-in-law play him for a sucker. If he succeeds he will rate exactly the same in our book as the late Franklin D. Roosevelt in defeating socialism by adopting it. We still believe most Americans had "rather be dead than red." Also that there is a growing demand to abolish the "Welfare State" and to reestablish the Constitutional Republic.

Faireloth Is Back Of Week

By DAVID M. MOFFIT

ATLANTA (UPI)—Tennessee tailback Mallon Faireloth, a 19-year-old sophomore who probably would have seen only limited duty this fall if the Vols had not been plagued by early-season injuries, Tuesday was named Southeastern Conference "Back of the Week" by United Press International.

Faireloth, a 192-pounder who has been nominated for this honor several times before this season, was cited for his great all-around play in Tennessee's 26-16 victory over Kentucky.

The Condon, Ga. native was cast in the mold of Tennessee's long line of All American tailbacks Saturday as he passed for two touchdowns and ran 40 yards for a third to lead the Vols to their first victory over Kentucky since 1956.

Faireloth gained 71 yards running and completed five of seven passes for 76 more to give him a total of 147 yards for his afternoon's work. He has now gained a total of 785 yards this season.

Tennessee's first touchdown was on an eight-yard pass by Faireloth. The third Vol TD came in the third period on a find 40-yard run by the Tennessee sophomore and then still in the third period, he passed 15 yards for the final Vol tally.

Faireloth had two competitors for SEC Back of the Week honor following a comparatively light weekend in which only four games were played involving SEC teams.

There were votes cast for quarterback Bobby Hunt who led Auburn to a 32-15 victory over Florida and for halfback Wendell Harris who scored 26 points in Louisiana State's 62-0 rout of Tulane.

Hunt ran 11 yards for a touchdown on the opening play from scrimmage and later passed for another. He gained a total of 177 yards to climb into third place in the SEC total offense race with a nine-game total of 928 yards.

His day's bag was more than the combined total for Florida and raised his career mark to 2,149 yards—a new high for three years at Auburn.

Harris scored three touchdowns, kicked six conversions and ran across a two-point conversion to raise his season's scoring total to 94 points in the final game of the regular campaign for LSU. Only three other players in SEC history have ever scored more points in a single season. These were Jackie Parker of Mississippi State with 120 in 1952, Steve Van Buran of LSU with 98 in 1943 and Frank Sinklon of Georgia with 96 in 1942.

Murray State To Open Cage Play

Murray State basketball team launches its 1961-62 season here Saturday night against powerful Mississippi and its "wait and see" situation for Racer Coach Cal Luther.

With three sophomores scheduled to start against a team that last year ran up a 23-3 record, Luther has little to go on, as far as making any predictions is concerned.

"We're still a long way off," Luther said during a pause in practice drills, "and with so much inexperienced talent we have no way to judge our squad until we put them into competition."

"We appear to have good speed and seem to be able to shoot well," Luther continued, "but as for what we'll do in game situations, I couldn't say."

The three sophomores slated to start Saturday are Al Varnas, a 6-2 guard from Chicago; Scott Schlosser, a 6-2 forward from Elkhart, Ohio; and Jim Jennings, a 6-6 center from Dayton, Ohio.

Coach Fred Lewis also boasts of two other backcourt standouts in 6-2 Jackie Laird and 6-2 Joe Grubler. Underneath, Southern has 6-9 Jim Walker, 6-6 John Smith, a sophomore, and 6-4 Ed Maness.

The Southern-Murray contest will be the season opener for both teams and it kicks off a rugged 25-game schedule for Luther's young troops.

San Fernando University visits here Wednesday, Dec. 6, then come home games with Miami (Fla.) Dec. 8, Arkansas State Dec. 9, Northwestern La. Dec. 11, Jacksonville University Dec. 13, and Mississippi State Dec. 15. At that time, the Racers journey to Shreveport, La., for the Gulf South Classic, which will be staged Dec. 27-29.

BOX HOLDS MYSTERY SOLUTION—Fred Goerner, radio newsman, receives in San Francisco a box containing what he believes are the remains of Amelia Earhart, who disappeared 24 years ago during an "around-the-world" flight. Her navigator, Fred Noonan, also was lost. Goerner made his "mystery find" on Saipan Island and Prof. Theodore McCown, University of California anthropologist, will attempt identification.

Problems Are Many

But prosecution of officers and members presents government lawyers with a host of legal problems — of which the Communists are expected to take full advantage.

First, the government will have to prove the identity of officers and members, a difficult and time-consuming process.

Secondly, the party argues that members would open themselves to prosecution under the Smith Act by registering. They argue that this would be in violation of the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, writing the opinion of the majority in last June's 5-4 decision, conceded that the matter of self-incrimination might be involved in registration by members or officers.

Collecting Cookbooks? Here You Are!

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

IN recent months, countless new cookbooks have gone to press. It's a good season for them, since they're popular Christmas gift choices.

There are books for beginners and books for experienced kitchen hands. There are fascinating foreign recipe round-ups, cookbooks devoted to specialties — diets, electrical cooking aids, holidays and other special occasions and, of course, all kinds of food specialties.

Festive Recipes

With Christmas around the holiday-lit corner, here are festive recipes for the season from three of the new cookbooks.

There's Oliebollen, traditional Dutch Doughnuts from C. Countess van Limburg Stirum's "The Art of Dutch Cooking".

Mulled Cider is just one of many holiday offerings suggested by Hila and Louis Coleman in "The Country Week End Cookbook".

Christmas Crunch, easily-made candy bars, is an American specialty from "The Progressive Farmer's Southern Cookbook".

These are just three new cookbooks that make a collector sit up and take notice, and because it's not possible to quote from them all, we have ready for you a list, describing some of the other volumes that have special or general appeal.

If you'd like a copy of this list, send your request, with a long-sized, self-addressed stamped envelope, to me in care of this newspaper.

And here are the Christmas recipes:

DUTCH DOUGHNUTS

(OLIEBOLLEN)

1 1/2 cakes yeast

1 1/2 c. milk

3 c. bread flour (or unsifted all-purpose flour)

2 eggs

2 tsp. sugar

2 tsp. raisins

HOT MULLED CIDER, garnished with lemon slices, is ladled into serving glasses. The recipe, from "The Country Week End Cookbook", is spiced with cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves.

1 tsp. chopped candied orange peel

1/2 tsp. grated lemon rind

1 tsp. salt

Oil or fat for frying

Confectioners' sugar

Dissolve yeast in deep bowl with 3 tsp. lukewarm milk.

(1 1/2 pkg. of active dry yeast may be used instead of compressed yeast. Reduce the milk to 1 c. and dissolve yeast in 1/2 c. very warm water.)

Put in another bowl, the bread flour. With a wooden spoon, stir in, one by one, the eggs. Slowly add the rest of the milk. Stir until all lumps have gone. Add sugar, raisins, orange peel and nutmeg. Add this mixture to yeast.

Cover with cloth and set to rise for about 1 1/2 hrs.

Add the salt. Fry in deep oil or fat (370° F.), dropping in a tsp. of dough at a time. Drain on absorbent paper. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Makes about 4 doz. doughnuts.

MULLED CIDER

Peel of 1 lemon

Peel of 1 orange

Cinnamon sticks

1/2 tsp. nutmeg

6 cloves

1 tsp. sugar

1 c. water

1 qt. cider

Combine lemon and orange peel, spices and sugar with 1 c. water in an enamel saucepan. Bring to boiling point, then reduce heat and simmer 10 min.

Strain syrup, add to cider. Heat mixture almost to boiling point.

Makes enough for 4 large mugs or 8 punch cups.

CHRISTMAS CRUNCH

1/2 lb. semi-sweet chocolate

or sweet milk chocolate

1 c. wheat flakes

Melt chocolate over hot water; add cereal; stir until blended.

Pack into loaf pan which has been lined with waxed paper. Allow to set until chocolate hardens; cut into bars.

BUDDING ENGINEER

THE CHURCH FOR ALL

ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a cornerstone of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plans to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Can't tell yet whether my son will follow in his Dad's footsteps. Blocks don't make an engineer. But he's learning some of the basic principles of physics with which many professions deal.

On the way home from Church, when he talks about his lesson, I recognize familiar signs... character is still in the mold. Deep conviction, bold dedication come later. But he's grasping those basic truths on which great living rises.

For a busy engineer who used to be hit-or-miss in his church attendance, fostering the growth of a soul is a fascinating experience... especially as I find my own faith deepening with every reverent day!

Can't tell about his following my footsteps. But I've discovered new dimensions in life following his.

Women Of Future To Be Amazons?

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Recent predictions that the average woman by the year 2000 will be an amazon compared with her sister of today have caused whimpers of despair among the men.

Will the predicted increase in size of females mean that by the turn of the next century they will tower over the men? That all clothes closets will have to be marked "hers?"

No, comforts a spokesman for the men. BOTH will need more closet space, because the men are growing larger on the average too. They will need roomier cars, roomier furniture, and at the rate they are expanding both vertically and horizontally, higher ceilings and wider rooms.

J. E. Peter, vice president in charge of sales for one of the world's largest manufacturers of men's knitwear (Healthknit), projected the growth of men for the next 39 years, based on company statistics kept since before World War I.

Four Inches Taller
Jeter predicts that by the start of the 21st Century, the average male will be four inches taller and weigh almost 20 pounds more than his counterpart today.

Prompting his company's research were statistics recently recited in this column on the predicted growth of girls. These figures had come from a manufacturer of foundation garments (Formfit), based on the way its garment sizing had changed since 1900.

These showed that as of 1900, the average woman was 5 feet, 2 inches tall; by 1960, was 5 feet, 4.5 inches; and, by 2000, should stand 5 feet, 6.5 inches. In weight, the figures for the same years were 114, 136 and 141.5 pounds.

As for the men, Jeter said, "we have watched a steady increase in men's garment sizes since before World War I. Add to this observation the expected advances in diet and nutrition, and you come up with a 'pretty good picture of what the man of tomorrow will be like.'"

Waistline Problem
Jeter said the average male by 2000 will be 6 feet, 2 inches tall, and weigh 176 pounds.

"He will have a waistline problem, though, unless he gets more exercise," said Jeter. Unless he is the careful, the push-button existence ahead will cause his waistline to spread from the 1961 average of 35 inches to 42.

Here are Jeter's comparisons of past, current and future sizes of men:

Height: World War I, 5 feet, 7.3 inches; World War II, 5 feet, 8.4 inches; 1960, 5 feet, 10 inches; the year 2000, 6 feet 2 inches.

Weight: World War I, 134 pounds; World War II, 146 pounds; 1960, 158 pounds; 2000, 176 pounds.

Waist: World War I, 28 inches; World War II, 33 inches; 1960, 35 inches; 2000, 42 inches.

CHAPTER 24

RUSTY'S trail seemed clear enough. The sounds were making no trouble so far. Being close to thirty-six hours old, it wasn't yet the trail of a creature in flight, but one that had just finished eating its fill.

Just now, or when he'd laid down the sign they followed, Rusty seemed to be ambulating alone, maybe drinking of a place to lie up for a while. It was their way after eating heavy.

The trail moved nearer the cliffs, yet not too near. It was as if he liked to have space around him while he moved along.

"Seems leery," Sam Fellows said once.

"Maybe just careful," Alec Temple said.

"Well, it's time he learned a little of that, all right," Sam said.

They stopped often to examine signs, and on the whole moved slowly. More slowly, any now, than Alec's remembrance of that first race through here last year. Beyond them, far out of sight, but well in good hearing range, the mounds were moving more slowly, too, for old sign took close working.

Then, around midmorning, Sam raised his hand and they halted.

"There he is," he said.

Halt expecting Rusty's shape to leap into view, Alec stared around the mist lifting on his neck. Then he saw where Sam was pointing — at a piece of bare ground before them, where water seeped down from a tumble of rock, and then on toward a draw below. A spray of tracks marked the moist, shaded red earth, and Rusty's, looking clean and quite fresh, were among them.

"Hand himself a drink here," Sam said.

Alec could tell that himself, but it was their size that struck him now. They were bigger than his hand outstretched.

"He's grown!" he said in a breath.

"Ain't that the truth," Sam said, swinging down to the ground to look closer. He made a cast around to study some of the others, but Alec kept his seat, staring down still at Rusty's tracks.

It was hard for him to believe that he had once held the marker of those great marks in his arms and had tenderly dressed and bound the one foot whose print in the earth below established clearly the identity of the others.

Sam had stepped across the dribe of water and now looked and peered among the stone ledges where the seep neared.

"The tom's been here, too," Sam said, stepping back across the water toward Jack.

Meaning, he led out across the water and on once again.

But the pace was slow now, really slow, and Sam was looking around to the sides of him more than ahead. Now and then he'd stop, too, and bend over while he eyed the ground underneath the mounds.

"I'd not be surprised but what we're on a trailway," he said. "Alec know about trailways. It was the line of movement of a lion might follow through the country. The full range of travel might cover twenty-five miles and more, and all that a lion might need to live on would be found somewhere along its length.

To look around him, though, as Sam was doing, didn't tell Alec much.

"You can't always tell," Sam said. "Unless there's tracks close to sight. But I been seen 'em lately, since we left the seep, every now and then. The old tom's and Rusty's, too."

Sam was no doubt correct, but all the same a point raised in Alec's mind. Then the mounds are trailing both?

"Not with Jupiter running things," Sam said. "I figured on something like this and brought him special. It looks to me like Rusty's working the old tom's trailway."

AHEAD now, and some ways to the left, a monument rose a hundred and more feet from the basin floor. Planes of sandstone red and acid-looking, with any cracks, Alec could hear the mounds telling away in that direction as he and Sam resumed the trail.

"I got a feeling he curved off up there," Sam said. "He might have into up in that monument over yonder."

"He could see the country anyhow," Alec said.

"Or the mare," he added after thought.

The monument was three or four hundred yards away. For half of that distance the ground remained rolling grass but they grew more uneven as they moved away from the monument. Finally, after several minutes, he mounted again.

"It's like I figured," he said, reining Jack more directly toward the great heave of stone.

"He swung off here. The trailway goes straight on, westward."

No matter the change in the ground, they quickened their pace some. The buying, which had sounded far at all times before, seemed to grow louder and more localized as they drew nearer the monument.

By the time they rode beneath the vast crimson uplift, the yelling poured down from above, and from time to time the hounds could be seen as they made their way up the steep, broken sides.

Sam sat easily on Jack. "Well, he went up there, all right," he said.

To Alec, Sam's composure was irritating. Graining his neck, he half expected to catch sight of Rusty on the peak. Cornered on that high island, he'd be as scared as on that day when he'd thrown the campground into turmoil.

Excited and worried, Alec began to get down, but Sam waved him back.

"He ain't up there now, boy; keep your seat."

"Couldn't he be?"

"I'd get against it," Sam said. "But we ought to gain something on him, though."

Alec had to ponder Sam's words a moment before he understood, and by the time he did, the buying of the mounds, wild and much louder now, bore out the meaning.

"They found his bedground," Sam said. "They'll have a better trail now, coming down, to they and going up. It's hard to say now much we'll pick up, but anyhow as much as he stayed there. Maybe a day."

Whether a day or an hour, the sustained excitement of the mounds told surely that something had been gained and that likely it was significant, for they poured down the far side of the monument in a torrent of frenzied sound.

"Come off west again!" Sam said. "We got something now. Come on!"

Reining Jack to the right, he set off on a stirring movement around the base of the monument. Alec, trailing on Sandy, listened to the sweep of sound descending in the unseen side beyond them, knowing that the hounds would be far ahead of them by the time they got around.

They were, and as they swung around more to the left to get behind them once more, Sam threw up his hand. Halting, he cocked his head to the side to listen.

"They're ahead and to the right!" he said. The trail goes back to the trailway, further west."

The mounds moved on along the new trail of sound that lay ahead. The pace now was faster, for the sound's excitement had seized on them all, whether man or animal, and ran through them in the way of an electric current.

Then, as the downslope and the swale beyond it came into view, Alec saw the mounds below them gathered into a snarling sort of animal motion.

"Something that was dark and furry and lion-shaped lay in the grass underneath them."

Alec has good reason to fear for Rusty's life now! Continue the story Monday.

Flame Cultivation — An Effective Tool For Weed Control

Weeds continue to take too much profit from Kentucky farmers. Now is a good time to plan an attack on these pests for next year. Let's think about flame cultivation. It's comparatively new to Kentucky but it may do us a lot of good. Flame cultivation studies conducted by our agricultural engineers at the University of Kentucky during the past few years have shown that it works well in controlling weeds in soybeans and corn. If enough farmers in this section are interested, we'll be glad to call a meeting and get one of these engineers down here to tell us more about it.

How Should Grain Be Prepared For Beef Cattle

All ear corn, barley, wheat and sorghum should be ground before feeding to beef cattle. Shelled corn may be fed whole except to show cattle or when hogs are not following cattle to pick up the waste. Oats also may be fed whole except to yearlings and two year olds and for them it should be ground.

All beef calves up to weaning age, chew their feed well enough so that it is not necessary to grind their feed.

Steers usually show no measurable preference between corn prepared in a hammer mill or a burr mill. In Kentucky there are some indications of an increase in use of feed prepared on a roller or crimping machine. Feed prepared with this type of machine is not as fine and does not produce the dust problem that comes from the use of some hammer mills.

Pays Better Than Government Bonds

Have you been wondering just where to invest some of your farm profits so you can make more money? Well, you're not alone. Lots of good farmers have been wondering the same thing. Many farmers have solved this investment problem by putting some money in limestone to go back on the land. Three-fourths of our soils in Kentucky are too acid for best crop production. Research has proved that limestone, when properly used, will average a return of 3 to 5 dollars for every dollar invested. That's a pretty good return on your money. Have your soil tested now to see if you can get this kind of return on your investment. If your soils are acid you can't afford to do without limestone.

Ventilation In The Poultry House

Ventilation is a real problem in poultry houses from now until March. One hundred hens give off 5 gallons of water into the air each day. Many people keep this moisture in the poultry house by shutting off the circulation of air. This causes the air inside the house to be damp and seem colder than the outside air. Thing to do is open up enough windows on the side away from the wind to provide air circulation to take this moisture out of the house. By ventilating the house the litter will be drier, eggs will stay cleaner and the hens will have fewer colds, and you'll make money.

Mulching Strawberries
Soon be time to put mulch on strawberries. It helps prevent heaving of the plants as well as crown injury. Mulch gives us cleaner berries and less frost injury. Get straw or other mulching material ready now and apply after a few rather hard freezes—probably mid to late December. You'll need about 60 pounds per 1,000 square feet (2 bales).

Before putting wet clothes in the dryer run the machine for five minutes to remove lint.
